

Facilities

LCSC's facilities and grounds in Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene reflect and preserve the region's rich heritage and beauty. With the addition of our newest facility, Sacajawea Hall, the Nursing and Health Sciences Division will continue to expand the Nursing and Health Sciences programs. The continued occupancy of new residence halls in Lewiston, the temporary relocation of the Center for Arts and History, as well as recent additions and improvements at our Coeur d'Alene site, have optimized our use of space and created a safe and aesthetically pleasing environment in which our staff and students work and learn.

International Programs

Currently, 98 international students from 26 countries contribute to the cultural diversity for which LCSC is well known.

Region-Wide Impact

Lewis-Clark State College serves citizens and communities throughout the region with a wide array of continuing education courses, distance education programs, workshops, conferences, apprenticeships, workforce training programs, and various non-credit educational programs. Each year LCSC's Distance Learning office coordinates several hundred online courses with total enrollment of approximately 3,500. Most online students have time or geographic constraints. LCSC's Coeur d'Alene Center and three outreach centers in Grangeville, Lapwai, and Orofino are improving the quality of life for Idahoans, while boosting local economies. The College's outreach activities include Adult/Family Education programs, the Center for New Directions, and the Idaho Small Business Development Center. LCSC's Center for Arts & History's galleries and exhibits hosts thousands of visitors each year, and the LCSC AmeriCorps members continue to provide mentoring to at-risk students, while recruiting volunteers to serve local communities throughout the region.

Lewis-Clark STATE COLLEGE

Connecting Learning to Life

Lewis-Clark State College was established by the Idaho State Legislature in 1893. It was originally designated Lewiston State Normal School, reflecting its early mission as a teacher training institution. In the ensuing years its name has been changed to Northern Idaho College of Education (1947), then Lewis-Clark Normal School (1955), and finally to Lewis-Clark State College (1971). The State Legislature and Board of Education authorized the latest name change in recognition of the College's expanded role as a comprehensive 4-year undergraduate institution offering programs in the liberal arts and sciences, professional studies, and technology.

Lewis-Clark State College has a proud heritage and a continuing tradition of service to the state and the nation through its unique, three-part mission of academic programs, professional-technical training programs, and community college and community support programs. LCSC has been rated consistently among the top public comprehensive 4-year colleges in the West by U.S. News and World Report. Situated in an attractive residential area (Lewiston, ID and Clarkston, WA have a combined community of 50,000), LCSC's Lewiston campus occupies 46 acres on historic Normal Hill at the confluence of the scenic Snake and Clearwater rivers. The beautiful campus enjoys the mildest winters in Idaho—a climate matched by a warm, friendly, educational environment.
